Destroying pensions can break your heart

By Joseph Andalina

Summer is long gone. Fall is making its escape and soon it will be winter. Oh joy, that means snow any day now! At press time, we have seen only more of the same from our leadership in Springfield. Redundant duncery, I like to call it. More of the same endless vehement attacks on police and public sector employees.

The overriding thing one can take away from this is some of these politicians want to really destroy collective bargaining and unions. Well, we know Republicans want that, but what is up with Democrats?

Easy—they run local municipal governments, too, and they see a way to hide behind the “red” officials and beat down unions to get concessions and take back raises, benefits, and other concessions.

You have heard it said over and over again that it is the politicians who have reneged on their promise and their responsibilities to fund their share of pensions. Truer words have never been spoken. And of course you just can’t get a fair shake from the press, either. That is what is perplexing. The 4th estate used to be sympathetic to workers’ Rights. Not anymore, it seems.

Now they just want to spread the “contagion” that we are greedy, over-paid, and have fat-cat pensions. If we really cared about the “kids,” they say, we would take less pay as teachers and work longer hours for a bonus pay and forget the contract. A disguised version of merit pay creeping back in the vernacular?

As far as cops go, the folks who walk the line from chaos to peace to you all, we should sympathize for the folks who lost their jobs, don’t get a pension, or have no marketable skills and give back to the community. We should do this by giving up our pay, and our obscene (to them) benefits,

Some things in life change the way we look forward. Recently, my older brother died. Over the past five years, I have buried 3 in-laws, so lots has happened to change our family. When my Mom and Dad died, I realized my brothers, sister and I were the family. My brother's death caused me to think about the face to face contact our family has with each other. So we decided to do a tour out East and through Ohio to visit and break bread with family and friends. It's so easy today with talking with everyone over the phone and some social media, but nothing beats being face to face.

Besides his death, one of the sad things about my brother was his distance from his sons. God only know what actually drove them apart but that is how he died. I am happy to say our immediate family is intact and we all talk and cherish the times we can be together. Which brings me to my point; how is your family doing? Shortly we will be looking to the Thanksgiving and Christmas season to lift our spirits. There is reason to hope despite two wars, facing global financial insecurity; people losing their homes to foreclosure; millions of others who have no medical safety net; still more who are homeless, hungry or living under brutal and repressive regimes around the world. Despite all this and more, there is reason to hope as we embark on the holiday season. In the center of all of this, in the center of our lives as families, faith communities, neighborhoods — our life together on planet earth — dwells the Prince of Peace. At the very center of who we are dwells God. Our greatest power and our greatest gift.

People say that the Gospel message is the ideal to which we are called. Rather than engage the Gospel, people run away, seeking safety in rules, regulations and rituals; marks of respect and places of honor. In our flight, we flee from meeting the needs of others and we flee from any possibility of experiencing in our lives the indwelling peace of God. It is only by living the Gospel, doing what seems impossible, that we will know God, as individuals and as a family.

So the question is: how do we walk from the here and now into January without getting overwhelmed or completely depressed? We do it by walking more slowly, with greater attention and awareness.

We do it by simply not engaging in disputes about how the turkey ought to be stuffed, the lights hung or the hymns sung. We do it by not engaging our anger, resentments and unreasonable expectations. We do it by doing each small thing in front of us with care; doing the best we can without trying to be perfect or expecting perfection from others. My Mom always said, "If you have nothing good to say, then say nothing." We do it by lightening up on ourselves and others; relying not on our own power but on God and His power at work within us.

Time and money are often in short supply but the greatest gift we can give, and can all afford, is the gift of peace, offering a haven of nonviolence in a violent world, being truly present to one another in an

Chief's Follies

By: Joseph Andalina

#1. The chief who should know better.

Thirty years on the job. A central Illinois chief of police was recently tagged by police and charged with DUI. Pulled over for no tail light on his trailer, the officer who stopped him smelled alcohol on his breath. Asked twice to take a breathalyzer test by this officer and the lieutenant, the chief of Chillicothe PD refused, not once but twice. After a failed sobriety test, the chief was arrested and charged with DUI.

He was put on administrative leave by the mayor. For the second time.

The chief who doesn't get it was arrested last year for domestic battery and criminal trespass. The charges were eventually dropped but a pattern is developing here.

Thirty years on the job and this leader doesn't know yet that you can't smack a family member, trespass after being told not to, nor drive a car while impaired.

What in the manual of common sense doesn't he understand? Not quite an example of follow me boys, is it?

#2 The not-so-great and powerful Oz.

Well, we did it. After more than a decade of fighting, MAP obtained the first-ever contract in Du Page County as noted elsewhere in the last (June) issue of the Rap Sheet. Since then, some vindictive leaders in Du Page have brought out their arsenal of ignorance, obstinance and stupidity to infringe on the bargaining rights of the deputies.

Grievances filed have been denied even before we got to the first step. Well, of course we ignored them and advised the chapter to pass their grievances up the ladder. If the childish supervisors refuse to look at them or sign off on them, then just go to the next step. And keep going on. Pocket vetoes do not work in the grievance procedure.

The administration wants MAP to use their form. We say, aah, well, not so fast; whose grievances are they? They do not have the right to dictate how, why, or when grievances are filed, nor do they have the right to implement their grievance forms for the union.

But these infantile behaviors are well ingrained in Du Page County. Who else other than these wasters of taxpayers' money would spend close to $1.2 million dollars to keep a union out of Du Page County? They laughed and swore that a union would never come to the Du Page sheriff's office, but ho, ho, ho, who has the last laugh now?

Most of this $1.2 million went to the lawyers of Seyfarth & Shaw, some of who raked in about $345 an hour for their expertise in fighting unions. Not money well spent. (Most of the "billable hours" attorneys who were involved with Du Page at Seyfarth and Shaw have left that firm to start their own agency, where they can continue to bs management that they can fight MAP.)

These deep pocket governments keep hiring them for their lackluster results. These attorneys should thank MAP for providing decent salaries, benefits, and vacations to them from the never-ending check-book governments like Du Page. Hey, don't have anything (much) against these lawyers—but I wish I could find folks drunk enough to pay me $345 an hour. (As an aside, there are other attorneys and expenses shelled out for Du Page. The $1.2 million was only to Seyfarth and Shaw attorneys.)

But I digress. The sheriff seems to be harboring ill will towards MAP and his deputies. The anti-union animus is striking. I can only surmise that the behavior at the county, which now also includes lecturing, scolding, and writing up deputies for the made-up reason of doing union business on duty comes from "the brains or lack thereof" at Du Page County.

Especially when the write-ups are for activities such as signing grievance forms, making a call to fulfill an inquiry, and has nothing to do with meeting, organizing, or neglecting a deputy's duties.

These issues are minor activities designed to clarify and provide documentation of grievances that take literally five minutes or less. But in the world of Oz, these are catastrophic activities that

#1. The Big One

It's over. MAP won. Du Page Patrol and Court Services have their first ever contract. Last June, a negotiated and ultimately stipulated arbitration award came into force.

After more than a decade of fighting as outlined here over the years, MAP and the deputies won. Those in the sheriff's office who laughed and swore that there would never be a union in the sheriff's office are trying to digest their words, which they obviously had to eat. Even after taking us to court disputing the legislative intent of parts of the Labor Act—they lost—and failed to legislate the union out. That was just one of many tactics used by the county, the sheriff, and their blood-sucking lawyers to beat MAP—to no avail.

A recently elected County board made up of reasonable people worked together, and aside from some disputes, the aforementioned stipulated award was obtained.

We are and have been working on contract enforcement (despite the shenanigans of a few brass) who may or may not have been following orders from some strong diabolical force to screw with their deputies. This will take time before the sheriff's minions settle down and act like adults.

You can not change an acrimonious person's acrimony! But that is working itself out as we pretty much ignore the protestations of the ignorant army of the sheriff's office. We will continue to try to work with those who work with us, but after years of the above stated acrimony, we aren't putting up with much bulls--t!

Meet us halfway and you will see us there. But now the deputies have a voice and you can be damn sure it will be heard.

#2. Benefits depleted for non-union employees

To make it all the more sweet that we at MAP won, shortly after our first contract the Du Page County Board slashed, burned, and microwaved sick, vacation, and comp time in Du Page County for all non-union employees, including the sheriff's police brass. It's expected to save a million dollars a year. But not as much as they spent fighting the patrol/court services deputies. That was about $1.3 million or so. Give or take a few hundred thousand.

Well, shut the door... has anyone asked how much of that savings in benefit cutting from the employees will the taxpayers see? Reduced government tax? School tax? Water tax? Cultural tax? Property or other real estate tax? 9-1-1 tax? Or whatever other taxes create. They also say that reducing employee benefits will benefit the taxpayer? Yeah? well if they reduce benefits for the taxpayer, how much of a rebate are we taxpayers going to get?

Please, someone inform this old goat? Like Steve Carrell says in the Office: "Explain this to me like I was a six-year old." (The county and the media are consistently silent on that $1.3 million they spent to fight MAP. They could send that to the taxpayers.)

But the press, reports that this slash and burn of benefits could save $8 million to $12 million over 20 years? Yeah, how did you Isaac Newton's calculate that? Who gets this savings? What happens when the non-union people wise up and go union? No more savings for you? Very disingenuous, I think.

My word, who comes up with this garbage? They are like the dictators who run a Banana Republic. They tell you all kinds of stuff that may not be true. The county also agreed that they (government) need to make sure the savings don't get directed elsewhere. Hedging their bets on more mismanagement? They just can't control themselves and you are all being pre-warned that this money might just get misdirected.

Wait a few seconds while I stop laughing. If you need to say that, you may as well let them into your pockets, because you just know that the money is going to disappear, just like the millions in the Du Page Water Commission, the millions in the Du Page Housing Department, and the $1.3 that went to attorneys for the county in this union fight.

interfere with the mission of the sheriff's office. Bunk, all of it. We have seen it before. Crybaby management that just can't let go of their autocratic past.

But MAP will file the appropriate ULPs and resolve these juvenile meanderings as time goes by. We always do.

A recent letter to the Daily Herald follows, but was not printed in the paper but did appear on-line. It seems that the local newspaper, while they bash cops and public workers' salaries, sick time, benefits, wages and pensions, just do not want to comment on the county's $1.2 million expenditures of taxpayers' money.

But to be fair here, while we had difficulties under the old county board and its Grand Poobah, we do have some new leadership which was willing to put away some differences and work to get a contract completed. We applaud them for that and hope a new dialogue will ensue, encouraging cooperation.

But we don't think Zaruba of Oz wants to do that.

August 8, 2011
Fence Post
Daily Herald

Recently, John Zaruba, in a Daily Herald article, urged the county to spare cuts to his office. What caught my attention was his closing statements.

If the two-part investigative stories in the Chicago Tribune on Zaruba getting campaign cash from his workers and his unevenness of discipline does not illustrate why the deputies and MAP battled for 10 years to bring a union here, your article should.

Zaruba says it (recent contract) limits the flexibility of (his) first-line supervisors to efficiently manage their subordinates. Zaruba didn't talk about the cost of the contract.

No wonder. It cost the county, according to an FOIA obtained by MAP, at least $1.3 million to fight his "subordinates." Why hasn't the Herald reported that wasted taxpayers' money? The true cost of labor here—fighting your subordinates. The sheriff can't refer to them as his employees? Or his deputies? No, to him they are only subordinates.

Not anymore. They are individuals with a voice now in their career. It has nothing to do with public safety, as he apparently tries to spin his deputies' union. It has to do with his deputies having a say in their working environment.

Zaruba probably doesn't appreciate this as he is no longer the Great and Powerful Oz at the sheriff's office.

#3. What is a subordinate, anyway?

A subordinate, in popular parlance, is a person of lesser importance or secondary. Or subservient or inferior. And in police work or the military, it is simply being placed in a lower rank and subject to a superior.

See where I am going here? It's really outdated for police work. Para-military designations used by the chief, sheriff, (see above letter) or politicians when you aren't cleaning up dead animal carcasses, taking a dog to the pound, writing a parking ticket, handling a neighbor dispute, taking agenda packets to trustees or any one of typically mundane activities you are expected to perform are not by a standardized process—military.

Besides, as much as you may like, you cannot just shoot the bad guys, send out drones, or use any "smart bombs" you may have in your department storage lockers.

So I feel the term subordinate by some bozo with a higher rank who just got some commander, colonel, or DC bars is just disingenuous. How did they get so much smarter than you from yesterday, before they got some added chevrons?

I don't know, either. But to me, it's like using an ethnic slur against your employees when you call them subordinates.

And they accuse us of being union thugs.

These political hacks and the editorial boards are worse than thugs because they hide behind the citizens. They aren't working the streets. So the press, after the county votes to spend $800,000 by giving $500 payments to non-union employees who haven't had raises for three years, disagrees, writing that "that practice cannot continue if taxpayers are to be helped by the benefit savings." So slash, burn and then screw them, too. No raises for the non-union people because it isn't good for the taxpayers. This would be funny if it wasn't quite so sad.

See people, enough will never be, in the bastion of Republican leadership in Du Page. And I'm not fond of many Democrats either lately, with their ravenous desire to eat your pensions.

But the point here is that the cops and courts dodged a big bullet here. There is pleasure, satisfaction, gratification, and contentment in joining a union. Let's hope the non-union people are not non-union for long.

#3. And speaking of pensions...

Illinois

At press time, the Fall Veto session was just starting. It is scheduled for October 25th, 26th and 27th, and November 8th and 9th. A little early this year so we won't be able to report on the political maneuverings until 2012. But you can bet your bippy that both parties will again try to mess with your pensions!

Unions, members, and friends of labor are geared up to contest anything that limits or diminishes our pensions. Keep your cards and letters going to Quinn, Madigan, Cullerton, and your own home District representatives.

Wisconsin/Ohio

From the strong protests in Wisconsin after their governor's union stripping bills, supporters of labor were able to force a recall for state senators. The good guys picked up two seats and maintained their Democratic members in similar recall votes against the bad guys.

The crux of it here is Democrats wound up one short in their bid to overturn the law paved by enemies of labor — Republicans. But the Democrats are only one short and may pick up some sympathetic votes or support from a Republican who fears disaster if he/she continues to vote against labor. The opportunity to recall the governor in November is still a viable option. We'll keep you informed.

And in Ohio, another devil towards labor really eviscerated collective bargaining for all state and local government employees. It was a disaster for labor. Governor Kasick dismantled collective bargaining almost in its entirety. (He also called a police officer "an idiot" live and in color because he got a ticket.) The governor refused to even negotiate with the various public sector unions about the dismantling of their labor rights.

But in Ohio, the citizens can overturn a law by referendum. They had to get over 200,000 votes to do so, but wound up with about 500,000. More than enough to cover any signatures thrown out in a court fight, and demonstrating to Kasick that maybe this law was not a good idea.

So guess what? Yeah, he wants to talk if only the unions would agree not to have the recall of collective bargaining on the ballot in November. Fat chance, Governor. We'll see how this pans out later this year. Cross your fingers for the good guys.

One more thing on Illinois politicians.

Best for last—press time for the Rap Sheet was before the Fall Veto Session as stated above. Pension legislation seems to be on the table, but no guarantees that it will shake out. Politicians for change may not have the votes in this session.

More likely I hear is the introduction of a three-point bill that might be introduced in 2012. The gist of it is to make pensions a multiple choice. Speaker Mike Madigan and his group apparently want a choice of three plans.

1. Not a major issue for some, but a bill that provides that smaller, underfunded pension in danger of going under to be transferred or consolidated to the IMRF. Yep, sweep your pensions into the IMRF. Don't know how drastically that could affect some members, but there seems to be movement here.

2. The old Tier 1 and Tier 2 pension placement plan. You want to keep your current pension of 50 years old and

I was never subordinate. I was a non-ranking grunt and proud of it. I am, however, subordinate to my lovely wife who knows all and does everything.

Never inferior to anyone, it rankles my sensibilities to hear hard working cops, deputies, or public sector employees being referred to something less than what he/she is. Why not just call us employees or officers or deputies?

So what burned my cookies recently? Again, our fine Sheriff of Oz, in a recent newspaper story where he didn't speak at all about the cost of the labor contract (wonder why—see the Follies above on the $1.3 million) but he said during a budget presentation... "it's (the labor contract) limiting the flexibility of first-line supervisors (his) to efficiently manage their subordinates." However, he looks upon this "as management internal challenge that will not affect public safety."

So how does one translate this mumbo-jumbo?

Well, first, the S-word comes out again. His first line supervisors are limited in managing their subordinates. Why not call them employees or deputies? I see a power thing utilizing the opportunity to diminish his deputies, reminding them like being continuously brainwashed that they are still...only subordinates.

Second, he wants to show the County board that the union contract causes difficulties in pushing around his "subordinates" but that he (they) will rise to the challenge and once more slap his children around the way he used to.

And third, this will not affect public safety? What the hell is he talking about? Public safety? This does not affect public safety in the teensiest-weensiest bit. It is insulting to insinuate that working within the confines of a fully negotiated/stipulated arbitration award that affects the employees' wages, benefits, and working conditions only may be a public safety problem. Had nothing to do with public safety.

But our (I imagine) pissed-off sheriff still wishes to maintain his position as the top autocrat, but little Toto is currently pulling away the curtain to show what is behind it. And it ain't pretty.

#4. In the timeless land of Enchantment

Recently, the Chicago Tribune printed a two-part investigative report on Zaruba. It had to do with the amount of money he rakes in from his employees for his campaign. He is the #1 leader. And typically, the article illustrated those who feel this is wrong, and those who feel that the sheriff is just a wonderful guy. There were opinions from many in high places who feel that it is never proper for your employees or "subordinates" to be expected or ever asked to give to any political campaign. I agree—even if you want to. Stay clear and let him get elected by his party and the people.

But if you don't contribute and you get into trouble, no matter how minor, will you be in deeper dog doo-doo because you didn't give? That is the crux of these stories.

Great job in reporting. It needed to be told. And as they say in political talk shows everywhere—you make the call. But what is interesting is that I saw nothing in the major Du Page area newspapers about this report on Zaruba. Why not? Are they afraid of the wizard? Afraid that the pipeline of information about accidents murders, violent crime and political nonsense will turn off like the proverbial bathroom faucet if someone says anything contrary about the image that he (like most politicians) put out before the public?

Does he have some members of the fourth estate in his vest pocket? Are they embarrassed that their fine sheriff, put up on a pedestal for so long, actually has some warts? Or is it simply like some of us have been told—it is just not newsworthy.

So possible inappropriate behavior by an elected official and about $1.2 million spent by a government is not newsworthy? Since when? But we are the greedy ones.

#5. Employee love fest

No explanation needed here. This is a partial transcript on our ongoing Barrington Hills interest arbitration case.

Mr. Abboud, who is the mayor, demonstrates his skill as an orator and the love for his employees. Wonder why which are overtime, sick time, or vacations. Of course, we should take a lower pension so we can be like all those folks out there who didn't want to get into governmental work and stay up on midnights, miss kids' birthdays, Christmas, and other days. Work shifts or 12-hour days, and sometimes never get a weekend off.

Yes, we should forget about being disrespected, spat upon, sued, accused, punched, shot, stabbed, or murdered in other evil ways. Or perhaps killed in a car accident responding to a domestic violence call or armed robbery. All in a day's work for an ungrateful political spectrum, government, and citizenry.

Yeah, what the hell. All those folks crying about their jobs could have tried to be a cop. Or a fireman. Or a public works employee. But then, they would have to go into burning buildings, or stay three to four nights a week at the firehouse, away from their families, playing with their hoses. And listening to someone other than their spouse snore.

They could have the heartache of losing heart attack victims or pulling pulverized teenagers or drunks out of wrecked cars. Not everyone's image of a fun job, is it? And how about those of you in PW (no, not PeeWee Herman, but public works), driving a snow plow for days during snowstorms, ice storms and blizzards so people can get out of their driveways and go to Starbucks. Not a lot of takers. And what about telecommunicators, who are corralled in the radio room for 10-12 hours a day listening to the mundane, the whining and heart-stopping emergency calls for assistance.

Oh, now there is interest in these jobs, they say? I see. Since they had crappy jobs and lost them, they want ours now? I get it. So let's erode the profession we love so those who could give a rat's ass in the private sector can compete with those in the public sector, driving down our wages—until the private sector rises from the ash heap and then no one wants our job due to the commitment involved.

So if the politicians get their way and take away our wages, benefits, right to bargain, and pensions, just how long will it be until our profession is crappy, too?

But politicians want that. They want to go back to cheap labor. Bring on the 60's and 70's where us old dogs worked three jobs to make ends meet. We as a union and others fought hard to change the paradigm that a public servant worked for peanuts—and for peanuts that were left over by the circus elephants to boot. Thirty years later, a lot of current cops have no knowledge of the fight. But the purveyors of evil remember.

So if the politicians win and "it's back to the future," just who is going to get all that money we gave up? Yeah, someone please tell me and tell me true.

I never see where that money is going. I am highly suspicious that if it's not outright diverted to some pork barrel project that it will be miscast, misspent and outright misdirected to someone else's special interest.

The only people in government who will enjoy a week on the beach are the politicians. They already have the summer off, most of the fall, and can vote "present" to avoid a discussion even while they are supposedly working in either assembly chamber. Even some newspapers have warned about these "savings" being diverted. But still the media sides with the brass. Yes, it is very strange.

Politicians always say they feel your pain. Just like the mayor of Naperville who also sat on the Illinois Tollway board. (Notice Frank the Hot Dog guy or maybe Harold who owns the rib joint are rarely on those boards, speaking for the people. Only politicians and the like.) It is truly a closed fraternity.

But old George is quoted as saying in a Herald News article last August regarding the Tollway rate increases: "My heart goes out to those (people) going through tough times and that have lost jobs." But he voted for the increase in tolls, despite his heart going out to those who have lost their jobs. What the hell, they can always drive the back roads, I guess.

He also felt the pain of cops laid off in his town last year. Pradel quoted in a news item (he is also a former Naperville officer, from I believe the Civil War days) said the turmoil over last week (cop layoffs) has broken his heart. He said he hoped the officers would agree to a pay freeze, like many non-union employees. "Those are my buddies" he continues, "but we all have to work together and try some give and take."

48 hours of furlough time in 11-12 and 48 hours of furlough time in 12-13 mutually agreed upon between the employee and the supervisor.

They are also now allowed to carry over an equivalent amount of vacation for each fiscal year for use in fiscal year 13-14 or later, without any expiration. Everything else is being extended from the current contract.

In the event the City of Waukegan decides on demotions or lay-offs the agreement becomes null and void and the Union members would be paid for any and all concessions retroactive to the date of execution of the agreement, which occurred May 17, 2011.

Jerry Marzullo Prospect Heights: Sergeants and Patrol

The two most senior full-time officers who were laid off reinstated immediately.

Minimum staffing level of 18 full-time sworn officers for the Department. If minimum manning falls below 18 sworn officers, the City must hire new sworn officers to reach the minimum manning of 18 sworn officers within 120 days of falling below 18 sworn officers.

Arbitration of discipline for terminations.

$1,000 salary increase for all bargaining unit members effective upon ratification of the contract by both parties. 1% raise effective May 1, 2012 and a further 1% raise effective November 1, 2012.

If a full-time officer is forced back to work on a holiday (the six designated holidays under the contract) that officer is to be compensated at two and one half (2 ½) times their straight rate of pay for all hours actually worked. Sergeants compensated at the Sergeant’s rate of pay if demoted for any reason except disciplinary reasons.

Increase in sick leave buy back hours.

you need a union? And Mr. McGuire is their attorney. I do not know who is the bigger fool. I’ll leave that up to you.

Partial transcript:

Mr. Abboud: I have an arbitrator (sic) panel question. How does the union view longevity pay? I mean, other than beer money, what is it you see the value of it?

Mr. Garza (MAP attorney): It’s the Village’s position that this is beer money?

Mr. Garza: That’s kind of insulting, so you know.

Mr. McGuire: It’s orange juice money, go with that.

Mr. Abboud: Yeah, what is...

We are waiting to get the transcript from day 5, where the village stated that the only reason that the officers want holiday time off is to spend time drinking, falling half off their bar stools, and that officers should not be entitled to life insurance, because if they are killed in the line of duty, they are entitled to extensive pension and federal benefits. It was implied that the officers are not worth the benefits that they receive when killed. Gives new meaning to the word donkey!

#5. Mount Prospect chief on patrol

On August 19, 2011, the Mount Prospect Police Chief was involved in a pursuit involving a motorcycle. The chief was running radar in his unmarked Ford Explorer at night on Golf Road. He clocked a motorcycle travelling 70 mph in a 40 mph zone and attempted to stop it. The motorcyclist did not like the idea of being pulled over.

The chase lasted for about three miles and reached speeds of 90 miles an hour. The Journal Topics newspaper reports the chief saying “I try and give the motorist the benefit of the doubt at first because they may not have seen me,” commented the chief, who pointed out his Ford Explorer vehicle is equipped with a siren and lights just like a squad car. “The difference is my car is a typical Ford Explorer and I think people are more comfortable with who they really are in cars and on motorcycles since I don’t stand out.”

The chase eventually ended in when the motorcyclist crashed his bike. He suffered only minor injuries and was taken into custody at gun point by the chief.

We at MAP would like to point out a few things of interest. First, the Chief of Police of a larger police department is conducting radar! At night! How often does that happen? Second, do we know if the chief violated any of the department’s chase policies? Third—something not reported in any of the newspapers—the patrol shift commander who was responding to the scene was involved in an accident. The commander, in an unmarked car, was hit broadside while he was going through against the red light (lights and siren activated, too!). A chase no patrol officer would likely be allowed to conduct resulted in an accident involving an innocent party. Thankfully no one was hurt!

Lastly, the chief had a patrol officer write the tickets. And that is what qualifies this as a “folly.” On one hand, the chief is actually doing some police work. Strange but true. On the other hand, really, a chief running radar in his department’s Explorer? And a chase? I guess he doesn’t need approval, but I see he covers himself by saying in one news report that the suspect was weaving in and out of lanes doing 90mph at times and if the guy hadn’t crashed, he would have terminated the chase because the distance between the suspect and the Ford Explorer was growing. I’ll bet it was.

But who is going to question the boss? The commander who crashed his ride? Probably not. How about the cop who wrote the ticket for the chief? Don’t think so.

But while we see some good here, really chief, c’mon. If you’re going to play policeman, write your own traffic ticket. Attend your own court dates, too. We have seen enough of that stuff in the past. It’s a bad habit of the brass. Play copper, but then have the copper do all the follow up. It should not work that way.

And one last thing. “Leave the driving to us!”

Okay, Mr. Mayor, but you would think if they (cops) were your buddies, then maybe you would not support layoffs. Do you leave your buddies on the field without support during battle or a labor crisis? No, that's not the way you treat "your buddies." You are supposed to be there for them—always. For better or worse. (No, wait, that would be like being married. But it works for that, too!) And why should those who had the foresight to join a union give up what they bargained for? And your councilmen agreed to pay them the way that you then let your buddies get laid off for. Loyalty? I'm not sure.

Sour grapes it sounds like to me, says Yoda. (By the way, everyone I believe ultimately got their jobs back and their pay—something that might not have occurred if they were non-union or if cities really didn't need cops to keep people safe.)

The mayor of Naperville also called on the state legislature for pension reform. He wants to bring fairness to the pension system and relieve the burden to the taxpayers because the pensions are unsustainable. Well, we all know why it may be unsustainable, don't we? Because nice guys like George and some not-so-nice guys like a neighboring mayor or three, may have taken a pass on their promised payments and contributions in the past. It all seems to me like such a frame-up of public employees. George also admits to having a pension with 29 years of service, because he was a cop under General Grant for many years.

I read nothing about how he wants to give back to the community and the pension system by giving up some of his money. Of course not—they never do that—they worked for their pensions but current coppers can go kiss their unsustainability. I hear that from the brass, superintendants, and other big-wigs when their perks are under scrutiny. They worked for their money is their lament. They never, however, come out for us, do they?

The mayor is never shy about implementing an increase in cultural taxes, gas taxes, or garbage taxes, either. Where is the poor public sympathy when it comes to those belying up to the bar and paying more taxes when they are out of work? Government always needs more money and how are they going to pay for it?

Wait, I think I got a vision! Take it away from the public sector workers, then we can cease some tax increase in the future—maybe. But until then, y'all just have to pony up and take it in the you-know-what. And speaking of ponies, I see one in there now at these council meetings. I'm looking for the dog now!

When a gas tax in Naperville came up and gas station owners complained, George said "It's a fair tax, because the funds generated, flow directly back to the roads." Whatever that means. Someone please tell me. Explain, as I've said before, like I was a six-year-old.

But to illustrate what mayors are all about, a Show Me restaurant, akin to Twisted Kilts and Hooters opened up last year in Naperville. Not as revealing, however, with scantily clad females, but similar. The mayor, who is also the liquor commissioner, dawdled on whether to issue a license to serve booze.

Neighbors were concerned about safety in their neighborhoods. Typical N.I.M.B.Y.-type reaction. Happens all the time and we all know that development almost always prevails no matter how many petitions are filed, council rooms are packed, or little kids with signs show up.

They went through the dog and pony show (see—there's the dog) of a dress code for the ladies, outdoor seating and events. The mayor asked for more time to make his decision and ultimately came back on the side of business. Surprise! Really, who can say no to a pretty lady in short shorts, spandex, and a skimpy bra as a uniform?

Opponents fearing for destruction of the city's moral fiber (who are these people?) if the restaurant opened, lost ... but Mayor Pradel said he (actually) "lost sleep" over his decision to issue a liquor license because of these concerns.

Golly-gee-willikers! The mayor's heart in this incident also went out to the folks in the form of lost sleep. So in one case, his heart was broken. On another he rationalized the fairness of taxes, proclaimed to be buddies with laid off cops, and lost sleep over scantily clad ladies. But he still voted against all his angst and heartaches. Like politicians do, all the time!

So what's the point? Well, not to pick on George, Please, no cards or letters. He is a nice man. Honest. He has integrity and is a true believer. People like him. He smiles, wears funny hats, and like he states, he "gives, gives, gives" to this city (when he wanted a pay raise).

Even I think he is Santa Claus, who just shaves his head and face to hide until Christmas. But he is a politician. Politicians do whatever they have to do to get elected, develop business and every parcel of empty property. They like any other business need revenue. They are tax-o-crats whose spending is never enough. While their "collective hearts" may go out to you, their minds are thinking "show me the money!"

They will say whatever is necessary to win and get what they want. And this mayor and dozens others seem the same in that venue. Who knows what's in their hearts as it breaks, because they want to take away our pensions, benefits, or increase taxes! Show sympathy and do what you planned to do. Delay and as the Chinese say, "In time all things come to pass." (I think the Chinese say that. Maybe it was Al Capone.)

So these political types just spew out more baloney. They are for you and "agin" you at the same time. They muddle through this maze, getting the press off their backs and in these times, on the backs of public sector workers.

They hope that we will get demoralized and give up. Just like the folks who say the gas tax, garbage tax, and 9-1-1- tax are necessities. They know that the folks will complain and eventually just give up. It's never enough and it is always fair—at least that's what they tell us peons. But who knows, maybe it's good to tax us to death. Because only then will you find some relief.

We must continue to wise up as we digest the words and openness of the nice guy mayor and the not-so-nice mayors. They stick together and so should we. We really need to wise up and fight for what we believe in.

Read between the lines, in the margins, and upside down. This is a battle we can win, if we persevere and vote for the right politician and ever so more important, let our legislative reps know what we want and don't want.

Remember all these mayors, nice or not, belong to one league, the Illinois Municipal Mayors League. They are anti-union and probably are not concerned with your feelings one whit, although their hearts may go out to you as you slide into the Magic Forest with diminished pensions and benefits.

They want to win. So do we. But we can compromise. I don't think they will.

ps. Mayor Pradel: If you really are Santa, can you please bring me a Celestron telescope to me for Christmas? Please? Please? Pretty please?

To all our members, friends and associates across MAP, I hope you have a Merry Christmas, Happy Holiday, and New Year this coming season.

Yes, Herman Cain was good at business. Great! He became very rich from it. But what about teachers and cops and firemen? You know, these people we always say are heroes. They're such heroes that we pay them like crap. Well, they do what they do very well. It doesn't happen to be something that is ever going to make you (them) rich.

out, with 20 years of service and a 75 percent payout? Then you will pay more than your 9.1 percent you are currently contributing from your paychecks. No mandate for your employer to pay the same. And no word about how much more. Two, three, four percent? Open for discussion.

3. You go into a 401 (k) type plan with a defined contribution. Not what you have now. And of course, no one is saying if this is even constitutional. But this is what some Republicans and Democrats want—to see you starve in a 401(k).

But just as Governor Quinn is ready to go back on his word for negotiated pay raises and no layoffs when he promised them, I think they want a fight to open the Constitution. If they lose, then they know these issues will not go quietly in the night and the press and public will be silenced, taking the heat off.

If the courts say open up that baby, then it's a whole new ballgame.

Stay tuned.

Thoughts and Prayers

To our MAP Board secretary, Rick Tracy, whose mother, Alice, recently passed away from complications of open heart surgery. Our deepest sympathies and condolences to the Tracy family.

APCO Telecommunicator of the Year Award

Congratulations to Billy Jo Noll-Brink from our Wescom chapter on receiving the APCO Telecommunicator of the Year Award. Along with being the chapter's vice president, Billy Jo also holds the position of Telecommunicator-in-charge. It is a testament to her ability that she is able to hold a management and a union position while excelling in both. She also takes on many duties within the Center, all while battling ovarian cancer for the past 16 years. Best of luck to you, Billy Jo, and congratulations again!

Disability payments issued

MAP has awarded the above benefit to Officer Robert Michelotti of Arlington Heights PD, and Officer Christopher Springborn of Sugar Grove. MAP wishes them well in all of their future endeavors.

MAP web site/strike vote article

MAP has led one of our chapters to the brink of our first strike over wages/benefits and wasteful negotiations at NorthWest Central dispatch. See the full story on our web-site under MAP News and Events.
